Low Water Pressure in Plateau is Being Investigated

October 6, 2020 – Iqaluit, Nunavut

The City would like to advise residents in the Plateau that some units may be experiencing lower water pressure during peak use times. The City is working to resolve the issue and is continuing to monitor the water flows. Residents are advised that the situation is expected to continue for several weeks until a solution can be implemented. There is no boil water advisory in effect. The City will provide updates as the situation changes.
